POETRY

YOUR ABSENCE.

The cherry trees have bloomed again since last you went away.
But I am weary and have missed your presence just as they:
I walk among our garden things and tell them you'll return.
Though, as I softly lisp your name, the words with sorrow burn.

The daffodils came back on time, w. a cups all full of gold.
Yet did not bring the thrill of joy they brought in days of old.
And west I know, along the hedge, where they are wont to grow.
They miss the step and welcome smile of one who loves them so.

Our mocking-bird is singing now along the wild-rose lane.

And busy thrush is singing, too, but in a minor strain;

I did not know how much your voice was woven in the lay Of every bleased bird of ours, until you went away.

I wish for words as many as the leaves upon the trees.

And words as sweet as meadow blooms that lure the crafty bees.

That I could tell you, o'er the miles that separate us far.

How a. the glories of the Spring are asking where you are.
